Personal Summary
Strong communicator with experience in public speaking and engaging diverse audiences. Demonstrated leadership through active involvement in organizations, including FFA, the ASL Honor Society, and 4-H. Experienced in media promotion, project coordination, and managing multiple responsibilities while consistently producing high-quality results.

Life Skills Development
Time management

- Organize personal calendar, with attending events based on farm duties, parents' schedule, and personal schedule.
- Learned specific time management through projects, specifically hog and ham, through UF. From having set times to weigh my hog, to timing out de-wormings that won't affect processing day, and everything in between.
- Planning out and assisting in running a 4-H event, being able to follow and create schedules for how I can most effectively get the most out of my day. Such as at events where I would choose my own schedule, like 4-H University or SRTLC.

Organization

- 4-H record books have helped me learn how to be organized with records and important information regarding my project.
- "Know before you go" lives have helped me understand new programs that I had never attended before, which allowed me to show up prepared for all of my events, like 4-H Legislature, STRLC, and more.

Public Speaking

- Club demonstrations and illustrated talks helped me build up my public speaking when I first started 4-H. From talking about my project at a basic level to getting more technical and getting other members involved in my demonstrations to make them interactive.
- I was an ambassador for my county fair by touring school groups around the animal sections of the fair. As I toured around, I also informed them about the animals we saw.
- Media Promotion for my fair and other 4-H events through the local news called Positively Osceola. I had many interviews with some of their people, as well as independent media moments, simply sharing information with the public.
- This all helped lead to my co-teaching a SRTLC workshop that was all about impromptu public speaking, such as for news media or interviews.

Creative Problem Solving

- Being on the Energizer sub-committee for 4-H University has made me create creative solutions or alternatives. Some energizers like "Red Light Green Light" would create a lot of chaos with 100s of teenagers. So instead, I offered an alternative version called "Green light go," which allowed for a more controlled environment while promoting listening skills.
- I have a wide range of experience with raising and showing different animals through 4-H. From making my own training sticks for my hogs by bending PVC pipes to coming up with quick solutions to in-show animal attitudes that allowed us to finish our time in the arena.
- Not afraid to share my opinion or different viewpoint. 4-H Legislature allowed me to showcase this skill through pro-con debate, which I participated in for almost every bill, sharing my opinion or a different angle not previously brought up.
